Design Concept summary: The Long Way Around

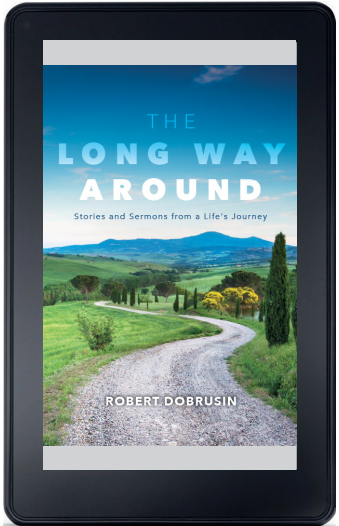

Below you will find the design choices made by your designer during the creation of each cover concept, as well as a preview of the cover design(s) on the Kindle Fire and Paperwhite devices

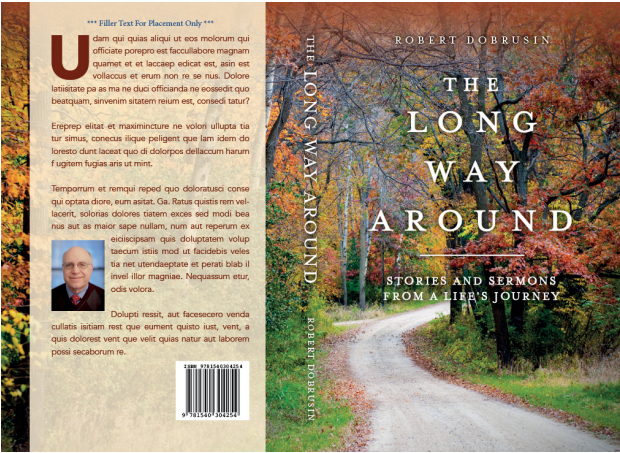

Cover Concept:

For your cover design we have followed the notes made by yourself within the design profile as well as taking inspiration from the provided cover image reference. We have used a photographic image from quite a high perspective, showing a long winding path through countryside on a glorious sunny day. What we like about this image is the organic feel it gives; there is great perspective to show the distance of this long, bendy path, whilst the path is also similar to a dirt track, as opposed to a tarmac - we feel if we were to used a paved road it would draw the reader's attention to the incorrect areas of the cover image - what we want them to focus on is the landscape, and the length and curvature of the road. We have used a modern typeface as requested, matching it with the interior font of your book - avenir. We have placed it in an area that with blending effects allow the cover image to bleed through the typography, creating a gradient-like effect. We have wrapped the image around the back cover, creating a seamless wrap around design.

Cover Concept:

For your second cover concept we have provided you with an entirely new concept, using different imagery style, typography and colour palette. We have used another photographic image - similar to your provided image reference - in autumn time. We chose this image as we feel the colours of the trees could reflect all the different chapters and sermons within your book. We have used a traditional typeface as we feel the religious tones throughout your book should express a more classical feel. We have continued the imagery onto the back cover, making sure typography is legible by placing within a text box.

NOTE: CreateSpace cannot accommodate spine text on books with a page count of less than 100 pages. Once your final page count is determined,we will remove the spine text from the cover design if your interior has fewer than 100 pages. Spine text is not allowed due our printing specifications on books with less than 100 pages.
